The year 2009 marks the twentieth anniversary of academic life of Professor David Joseph Attard, recognized as an authority in international law worldwide. To commemorate this milestone, a collection of essays has been written in his honour. The title of this book “Serving the Rule of International Law” is intended to reflect Professor Attard’s dedication, commitment and contribution to the field of international law. This work represents a close collaboration amongst friends, colleagues and former students involved in the field of international law.

Part I is a personal tribute to Professor Attard, Part II is dedicated to public international law and international relations, and Part III comprises two essays in human rights.

Serving the Rule of International Law is a worthy tribute to Professor Attard’s contribution to international law.

International maritime law is far from inert, everyday international affairs constantly test existing law and, in many occasions, require its development. The collection contains innovative studies on current issues and events that are testing the present state of international maritime law.

The book is intended as a Liber Amicorum to Professor David Joseph Attard. It celebrates his career in international law; he played a crucial role in establishing the IMO International Maritime Law Institute in 1988, the main purpose of which is to train lawyers in private and public international maritime law. Over the last twenty years he has continued to teach at the Institute and has played an important role in contributing to the work of international fora concerned with the development of international law.

This work represents a close collaboration amongst practitioners and academics involved in the field of international maritime law including IMO Secretary-General Efthimios E. Mitropoulos, Judge Helmut Tuerk, Professor Francis Reynolds Q.C. and Patrick J.S. Griggs CBE.

Part I contains general articles in international maritime law, Part II is dedicated to the law of the sea, and Part III is devoted to issues on shipping law.

Serving the Rule of International Maritime Law is of great interest to professionals in the shipping industry as well as practitioners, academics and students.
